REVIVAL MEETING

best of all, it will not last long either—come on now—every man who is interested in the St. Johnsbury Commercial club—we have in contemplation the surest plan for a continuation of the club's activities and one that every man in this town ought to endorse—so just come out and endorse the plan. Let's make this a meeting of genuine interest to the members of this club.

Let every member bring up some one thing that he may think of that will interest the club or community, no matter how small or how big, and have it discussed. It may be a boomerang or a blessing, who knows, but it will keep alive a healthy interest in the Commercial club and its mission.

Music will be furnished by the Commercial Club orchestra. The supper will be served by the Pythian Sisters. Tickets 50c each.

Place—Pythian Hall.

Time—6:15 p. m., Thursday, September 30.

Entertainment—A feast for both the body and mind.—Adv.

Letters to Members

Dear Sir:

Why you should keep your membership in the St. Johnsbury Commercial club.

It promotes a community spirit.

It gives you a wholesome interest in your neighbors' activities.

It broadens you out in every way.

A body of men can do much that cannot be done by individuals working alone.

It invites the healthy discussion of local problems.

It is right in line with what all progressive communities are doing.

It is your duty as a good citizen to be interested in this club.

No man liveth to himself alone and he couldn't if he wanted to.

Don't be deluded into thinking that your membership is not necessary—suppose that everybody thought the same?

St. Johnsbury expects every man to do his duty and surely one of his duties is to help keep this organization alive.

Yours truly,
C. E. PECK.

Letter to Caledonian.

To the Editor of the Caledonian:

The meeting of the Commercial club this Thursday evening cannot fail to commend itself to all who are concerned in the best interests of the club and the town. Some of the experiments in cooperation here in the past have not been distinguished by their success and the underlying reason has usually been that too much was done in the dark. Any attempt at self-knowledge either on the part of an individual or a community is valuable in proportion as it is honest and we understand that the club will be asked to consider a proposition to this end at the close of the banquet. It deserves full support.

One of the Committee.

FIGHTING FIELD MICE.

Their Activities Described—Orchards and Crops Often Injured by Them. [Prepared by United States department of agriculture.]

Field mice, which are such destructive pests in orchards and field crops, are divided into two groups—meadow mice, which live chiefly in surface runways and build both subterranean and surface nests, and pine mice, which live almost wholly in underground burrows. The pine mice may be readily distinguished from meadow mice by their shorter and smoother fur, their red-brown color and their molelike habits.

Meadow mice are injurious to most crops. They destroy grass in meadows and pastures, cut down grain, clover and alfalfa, eat grain left standing in shocks, injure seed, bulbs, flowers and garden vegetables and are especially harmful to trees and shrubbery. Meadow mice often attack orchards and nurseries in the winter under cover of snow, but they may attack trees at any season under shelter of growing vegetation or litter. The number of trees and shrubs attacked by field mice includes a very long list.

The ordinary guillotine type of mouse trap, baited with oatmeal or other grain or set in mouse runs without bait, has been found efficient in ridding the premises when infested with a relatively small number of either meadow or pine mice. It is also adaptable to large areas where the number of mice is great and where it is undesirable to lay out poison. If the mice are moderately abundant ten or twelve traps per acre are used to advantage. When trapping pine mice the tunnels should be excavated sufficiently to admit the trap on a level with the bottom.

Poisoning is the quickest and most efficient method of destroying field mice. The following formulas are recommended by the department of agriculture:

Mix thoroughly one ounce powdered strychnine (alkaloid), one ounce powdered bicarbonate of soda and one-eighth ounce (or less) of saccharine. Put the mixture in a tin pepper box and sift it gradually over fifty pounds of crushed wheat or forty pounds of grain constantly so that the poison will be evenly distributed.

Dry mixing as above described, has the advantage that the grain may be kept any length of time without fermentation. If it is desired to moisten the grain to facilitate thorough mixing it would be well to use a thin starch paste (as described below, but without strychnine) before applying the poison. The starch soon hardens, and fermentation is not likely to follow.

If crushed oats or wheat cannot be obtained, whole oats may be used, but they should be of good quality. As mice hull the oats before eating them, it is desirable to have the poison penetrate the kernels. A very thin starch paste is recommended as a medium for applying poison to the grain. Prepare as follows:

Dissolve an ounce of strychnine sulphate in two quarts of boiling water. Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of laundry starch in one-half pint of cold water. Add the starch to the strychnine solution and boil for a few minutes until the starch is clear. A little saccharine may be added if desired, but it is not essential. Pour the hot starch over a bushel of oats in a metal tub and stir thoroughly. Let the grain stand overnight to absorb the poison.

The poisoned grain prepared by either of the above formulas is to be distributed over the infested area, not more than a teaspoonful at a place, care being taken to put it in mouse runs and at the entrances of burrows. To avoid destroying birds it should whenever possible be placed under such shelters as piles of weeds, straw, brush or other litter or under boards. Small drainpipes one and one-half inches in diameter have sometimes been used to advantage to hold poisoned grain, but old tin cans with the edges bent nearly together will serve the same purpose.

SUPPER AT NORTH CHURCH

Members of Brotherhood Enjoy Fine Repast and Listen to Entertaining Talk.

About 100 members of the Brotherhood of the North Church enjoyed an excellent supper at the church dining rooms last Thursday evening. Old time songs were introduced between courses all joining in the singing. After supper Shane Leslie of London, England, gave an informal and exceedingly interesting talk on his personal experiences in the European war. He touched upon some of the horrible and some of the pleasant aspects of the campaign in Flanders, the effect of shell fire and charges, the generalship and soldiery of the different nationalities, and presented some rare and unusual views that were greatly appreciated by the Brotherhood.

A business meeting followed at which officers were elected for the ensuing year: President, Dr. W. G. Ricker; vice-president, E. A. Silsby; secretary and treasurer, W. V. Orcutt.

CALLED THE GAME.

Two Foul Balls Shocked the Australian Sense of Propriety.

A game of baseball that was scheduled as a feature of the police and firemen's patriotic carnival at the agricultural show grounds came to an abrupt and dramatic conclusion almost before it was started. It was a match game, America versus Australia.

In America's second inning a player deflected a fast ball straight for the densest portion of the crowd, and a scream was heard. The ambulance men rushed to the spot and found that a woman had been struck on the head by the ball, but was not seriously injured.

Without waiting to see if any damage had been done the players coolly procured another ball and continued the game just as if nothing out of the ordinary had happened. A few moments later this ball was also deflected to the upper story of the pavilion, striking a man on the shoulder.

At this Mr. Flowers, the minister for health, who was present, rushed out on to the ground and called out, "Stop this silly game!"

The players promptly obeyed his orders, and play ceased.—Sydney (Australia) Herald.

Not over 50 per cent. of the potato crop of Windham county will be marketed this fall. It has been some years since late-blight has bothered the potato growers of the county very much, and in fancied security most of the farmers this year failed to spray as a preventative. In consequence, they are paying for this failure with very poor crops. Not only are many of the potatoes unmarketable when dug but others begin to decay almost immediately after being placed in storage.
